Dear President Clinton:

The events of the last few weeks, with riots engulfing Northern Ireland again, show how unwilling this British government and its Unionist allies are to reach a just and lasting settlement in Northern Ireland.

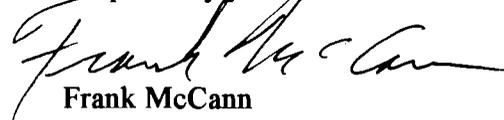

The provocative decision made by British Prime Minister Major to allow Orange bigots to march through Catholic neighborhoods threw gasoline on the flames. Along with the British squandering of the 17-month IRA ceasefire, the continual attempts to find new excuses not to come to the conference table, especially the introduction of the new "decommissioning" demand, the rejection of the Mitchell Report, there is no doubt in our mind where the main blame lies.

Nevertheless, there is hope. Despite recent events, the people in Northern Ireland want peace. If, as in other war-torn areas the U.S. Administration stubbornly continues to push for negotiations and a just solution, progress can be made. The most urgent task is to make sure that August is not like July, and violence does not truly become uncontrollable. For example, the White House and Senator Mitchell could demand that fair rules for contentious marches are devised and the Northern Ireland police, the RUC, does not become an arm of the Orange Order once again.

As your re-election looms and the departure of the current British government approaches, in a few months there will be new chances to make headway toward a just peace. Many millions of Irish-American voters, especially, are aware of your unprecedented work for peace in Ireland. What is needed now is wisdom and American persistence. We urge you to continue to stay fully engaged in this issue.

Thank you for your past support and your help in the future.

Respectfully yours,

Frank McCann
Int'l Executive Vice President
