Dear Mr. President:

I am writing out of concern for recent reports concerning your reluctance to appoint a Special U.S. Envoy to Northern Ireland. I urge you to fulfill your campaign commitment to make this important appointment so that peace can have a chance in Northern Ireland.

In a letter to Bruce Morrison on October 23, 1992, you stated that the appointment of a U.S. special envoy to Northern Ireland could be "a catalyst in the effort to secure a lasting peace." With the ongoing violence in Northern Ireland and British reluctance to restrain the use of lethal force there, this appointment would be an important step.

It is extremely important that peace finally come to the people of Northern Ireland. The United States can help to bring the discordant parties together and hopefully work towards an end to this long and bloody conflict. I urge you to work for peace by appointing a U.S. Special Envoy to Northern Ireland.

Sincerely,

Alfonse M. D'Amato
United States Senator
