THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

November 14, 1995

Dear Bob:

Thank you for your letter expressing your concerns about the Northern Ireland peace process. I appreciate your support for our efforts in working for the cease-fire and in encouraging the British and Irish governments and the political parties to sit down together to negotiate a comprehensive settlement.

I agree that the momentum of the peace process must be maintained. I continue to see our role as one of supporting and facilitating the process that the British and Irish Governments and the people of Northern Ireland have set in motion. We stay in close touch with officials of both governments and with representatives and leaders of all the political parties to encourage creativity and flexibility in the search for peace.

We see support for investment and business ties with Northern Ireland as a key element of our support for the peace process. Northern Ireland needs to realize its full economic potential if it is to offer its young people a peaceful and prosperous future. The White House investment conference held in May of this year continues to have an impact on the economic life of Northern Ireland and the border counties. Earlier this month, the Department of Commerce led a trade mission that included representatives of 19 companies interested in doing business in Northern Ireland and the border area. Under our AMBIT program, management interns from Northern Ireland spend three months with a U.S. company, learning American management skills and forging business ties. With U.S. support, the International Fund for Ireland has helped to create thousands of jobs and foster cross-community cooperation in Northern Ireland.

At the end of November, I plan to visit the United Kingdom and Ireland, including a visit to Northern Ireland. The purpose of my visit is to underscore our support for the efforts of the British and Irish Governments and the people of Northern Ireland to find a just and lasting settlement to the conflict. I hope it will also send a signal of support for investment in the region.

Thank you again for your support on this issue of vital concern to both of us.

Sincerely,
