Erin,

E-mail is down. Have been trying to send comments on your paper, which is very good. I love the structure. Some sections are absolutely wonderful. Some questions:

1) Let's remember the sections - #1 for "Looking in Field", etc.
2) Don't we have other examples of looking in the field? This section is important and seems a bit slumpy. Also cite Alford. But "empty the file" on this if possible.
3) CCP into is great. Well done.
4) Section on Salisbury property control warehouse doesn't indicate what was stolen. Can we highlight the problem better? Again, Alford might be helpful. Me in bold.

Train loot too.

Need a conclusion, right? I'd note explicitly that while many of the examples don't involve victims' assets, they are representative of certain kinds of behavior/problems.

Throughout paper, which is well written, think about the larger, more general point that you're trying to make. That's the reader's hard work more and tell them why this example/detail is important. Reference to rabbit hunting/chart that P. 16 (tense) would be a bit more.

Cheers!

T. J. (Newspaper article reference to restating what we did, etc.)

Most of the records in this series relate to two topics: claims against the United States for seizing, vesting, and liquidating property declared to be enemy-owned or enemy-controlled during World War II; and the disposition of external German assets seized during the War. The records of claims reflect attempts at achieving diplomatic remedies to losses suffered in federal courts in suits handled by the Office of Alien Property. Among the records of claims are those of Internationale Industrie- und Handelsbeteiligungen AG (Interhandel) of Switzerland, and Manfred Weiss, and his heirs, of Hungary. Most of the records dealing with the disposition of external German assets are for German assets in Japan, although there are also records relating to the disposition of German property in Brazil, Luxembourg, and other countries. Also included in the series are records relating to crafting legislation for dealing with compensation claims and war assets; German objections to the "overlap" of compensation payments under the German Equalization of Burdens Legislation and other funds; attempts by former Yugoslav nationals to receive compensation for time spent as German prisoners of war; the disposition of external Japanese assets; a few references to Nazi Gold; and the settlement of Greek claims against Germany for the destruction of merchant vessels and other property prior to Greece's entry into World War II. Lot 64A561? Entry 4051 Box 3 has information about former Gen-Gov. Frank's art collection in discussions between Metropolitan Museum of Art and Ardella Hall...?

Presumably, Jim Plaut, former MFAA officer, then curator at MMA, and Rorimer, director of MMA, wanted to buy for the MMA the missing Raphael that Frank had looted and everyone was looking for at 'war's end'. Even Wildenstein offered to search for this painting in 1958. Any interest?

General Records of the Department of State

Records of the Bureau of Public Affairs

Records of the Office of the Historian

This series contains copies of selected official records of the Tripartite Gold Commission (TGC) that were sent to the State Department when the TGC was terminated on September 9, 1998, for transfer to NARA. Another set of these selected records was sent to the Public Records Office in Great Britain. All of the official TGC records were transferred to the French National Archives in Paris.

Subject Files 1943-1972

A small portion of the records includes files relating to the recovery of cultural objects dispersed during World War II, and the programs for the return of historic objects to countries of origin. These files consist of correspondence, memorandums, and minutes of inter-Departmental committees and international conferences relating to looted art, disposition of German Libraries, settlement of cultural properties under U.S. control, and international protection of artistic and historic property. Also included are copies of Department of State Bulletin articles written by Ardelia Hall, and other reports that refer to her expert advice and guidance on these cultural concerns.

re: Investigating the Army

Just talked to Greg Bradsher. He said that nobody on the Swiss Gold project had ever looked at the Inspector General's records. Also, that the CID (CRIMIN. INVEST. DIV.) at the Army usually keeps records for only 10 years. Evidently, they generate a ton of docs every year. When you check with the CID in Baltimore, try to get info on doc. destruction policy/history. We should do this with all records (customs, treasury, etc.) so that we can include this info in the report.

Oh yeah, Greg said that the CID did annual reports that might be helpful. Check it out s'il vous plaît.
