THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

January 20, 1994

Dear Chuck:

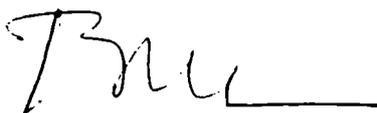

Thank you for your letter regarding my policy toward the situation in Northern Ireland.

The issue of a U.S. envoy is one we keep under active review, especially in the wake of the December 15 signing of the Joint Declaration by Prime Minister Reynolds and Prime Minister Major. The most constructive role for the United States at this point is to support the efforts of the two governments to revive the talks and maintain the momentum for peace that has been building over the past weeks and months. Those who have used violence to advance their agenda must now lay down their arms and join the dialogue for peace.

I have assured both Prime Minister Reynolds and Prime Minister Major that the United States remains ready to contribute to the search for peace in any appropriate way. We will continue to follow events closely.

Thank you again for writing.

Sincerely,

The Honorable Charles E. Schumer
